

Applying Digital Watermarks Using Printing Process Correction

Abstract

5

Image color values are modified in accordance with printing process characteristics. Digital watermark signal representations are determined and modified in accordance with the characteristics. The modified signal representations are combined with the original image color values. The image is then printed by the printing process. The resulting printed 10 image includes a watermark that is not materially affected by the printing process characteristics.